Why be a member of CACSL

The Canadian Alliance for Community Service-Learning supports you by

- providing leadership for the development and enhancement of Community Service-Learning in Canada,
- connecting with international networks, and
- promoting the benefits of CSL to universities, students, community organizations, and government.

CACSL advocates for the value of Community Service–Learning, encourages policy change to support CSL, and works to promote and support its further development in Canada. Member involvement through volunteering and paid membership is vital to the CACSL’s success.

In 2013 your membership contribution will support the growth and development of CSL in Canada through:

- Implementation of the Community First: Impacts of Community Engagement project
- Offer webinars to follow up on interests identified by members
- Launch a revised website with increased interactivity
- Host a national CSL symposium in conjunction with CUExpo, and start planning for CACSL2014 conference
- Maintain CACSL’s support for CSL practitioners
- Encourage the development of regional networks

Last year membership support enabled CACSL to support the CSL community in numerous ways. In addition to maintaining a presence to offer advice and guidance to those new to CSL we:

- Maintained of a collaborative blog to connect the CSL community
- Co-hosted a national conference May 2012 with the University of Saskatchewan. Largest CSL conference to date in Canada. Largest contingent of community partners.
- Hosted first McConnell CSL Awards ceremony at the conference
- Partnered with Carleton University in submitting a successful LOI to SSHRC resulting in SSHRC Partnership Grant for Community First: Impacts of Community Engagement.
- Supported the Atlantic Region in development of a regional network.

Benefits of Membership
